About the HHS Task Force Meeting at ALEC’s 2011 Spring Task Force Summit
ALEC’s 2011 Spring Task Force Summit will function a bit differently this year. Instead of a large, plenary luncheon, each task force will host a working policy luncheon prior to the start of the task force meeting.
The HHS Task Force has a terrific task force luncheon, “Chronic Disease 101,” planned on Friday, April 29, from 12:30-1:45 p.m. We'll learn about the prevalence of chronic disease, and also discuss how conservative-minded legislators can approach chronic disease issues from a “non mandate” perspective.

The HHS Task Force meeting will then meet on Friday, April 29, from 2:00-5:00 p.m. We’ll kick off the meeting with a few words from our new HHS Task Force chairs, and then we’ll have a roundtable discussion on exchanges with two highly-regarded national experts. Finally, we’ll debate three proposed model bills on health care sharing ministries, health compacts, and scope of practice issues. Please see the enclosed HHS Task Force Tentative Agenda for additional information.

TENTATIVE AGENDA

12:30 p.m.  HHS Task Force Working Luncheon: “Chronic Disease 101”
Chronic diseases—ongoing, generally-incipient illnesses like heart disease or diabetes—affect a staggering 45% of Americans. And while the Centers for Disease Control estimates that chronic disease accounts for about 75% of health spending, in government-run healthcare programs it consumes even more—96 cents per dollar for Medicare and 83 cents per dollar for Medicaid. With stakes this high, it is imperative that policymakers raise awareness about the fiscal and health effects of chronic disease; that the private sector establish voluntary, market-friendly wellness programs for health care consumers; and that individuals assume personal responsibility for their own health in order to stop chronic diseases before they start.

At this ALEC HHS Task Force luncheon, you’ll learn about the impact of chronic disease on state budgets and patients and discuss legislative strategies for raising awareness about disease issues.

FINDINGS AND PURPOSE
Members Participants of health care sharing ministries financially assist fellow members participants with large medical expenses with a result usually provided by health insurance. Due to their voluntary and ministerial nature, these ministries should be recognized in the insurance code as ministries and not as health insurance companies.

A health care sharing ministry (HCSM) is a health care cost sharing arrangement among persons of similar and sincerely held beliefs, administered by a not-for-profit religious organization. Those sharing through HCSMs are called members participants, and the money sent by members participants to other members participants to help pay for their medical expenses is called a share. The sharing is accomplished through members participants’ monthly gifts directed to families in financial distress and not to an insurance reserve fund. In addition to addressing the financial needs of those facing health challenges, HCSMs also seek to help meet spiritual and emotional needs as an aspect of the sense of community which exists among members participants.

As of 2010, HCSMs represent over 110,000 individual lives in all fifty states. HCSMs share over $75 million dollars per year for health care costs.

Since 1981, formalized HCSMs have played a vital role in assisting tens of thousands of individuals emotionally, spiritually, and financially through medical crises and the accompanying expenses.

Since HCSMs engage in voluntary sharing and not a contractual transfer of risk, they are not insurance. The regulatory requirements of insurance, if imposed on HCSMs, would destroy the voluntary, ministerial nature of the organizations. The public good would be served by explicitly acknowledging this through a specific exemption in the state’s insurance code to avoid uncertainty and waste of legal expenses.

HCSMs are under the oversight and general regulation of both the Internal Revenue Service and the states’ attorneys general since they are 501(c)(3) charities.

Ten Eleven states have already exempted HCSMs from their insurance codes, including Florida, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

This legislation is designed so that the state insurance code specifically recognizes HCSMs as ministries and not insurance, and not subject to the additional requirements of the state insurance code.

F. If this compact is held to be contrary to the constitution of any party state, the compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining party states and in full force and effect as to the affected party state as to all severable matters.
1. What is an Interstate Compact?

An interstate compact is a contractual agreement between states that is similar to a treaty. It binds states contractually and the obligation created by a compact is protected from impairment by the “contracts clause” of the Constitution.

2. What would the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact do?

The Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact would support a strong legal argument that it is a federal crime for anyone, including federal officials, to interfere with a state’s health care freedom laws, such as a law modeled on ALEC’s Health Care Freedom Act. Enforcing the individual mandate of the Federal Health Reform law would be illegal within the compacting states.

3. Why an Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact?

Because it can actually work. Unlike efforts to “nullify” the individual mandate of the Federal Health Reform law, the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact would have the ability to displace the individual mandate as a matter of state and federal law. This is because the Compact is authorized by an existing federal statute that gives preapproval to interstate compacts that coordinate criminal laws. Federal courts have ruled that Congress can effectively pre-approve interstate compacts. Federal courts have also ruled that congressionally-approved interstate compacts are the equivalent of federal law. These court rulings support a strong legal argument that the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact will trump conflicting federal laws, such as the individual mandate, when the compact becomes effective. The Health Care Freedom Compact combines state sovereignty with the power of federal law to restrain the federal government.

4. What will make the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact Effective?

For the Health Care Freedom Compact to be effective, a compacting state must a) enact a health care freedom law, b) make it a crime for anyone to interfere with its health care freedom law, c) authorize and direct the Governor to enter into the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact with at least one other state (both states must agree to identical language), and d) lodge the compact with Congress, when at least two states adopt it. Steps a), b) and c) can take place in any order, but the Compact will be ineffective until they all take place in at least two compacting states.

5. How do we really know the Compact will work?

The compact is drafted carefully to assist law enforcement in reciprocally enforcing criminal laws prohibiting the violation of actual or anticipated Health Care Freedom Acts. It squarely falls within the very broad and unlimited congressional preapproval for criminal law enforcement compacts.
under 4 U.S.C. § 112. The legislative history of 4 U.S.C. § 112 shows that it was intended to broadly authorize any and all types of criminal law enforcement compacts. See S. Rep. No. 1007, 73d Cong., 2d Sess., 1 (1934); H. R. Rep. No. 1137, 73d Cong., 2d Sess., 1-2 (1934) (“This bill seeks to remove the obstruction imposed by the Federal Constitution and allow the States cooperatively and by mutual agreement to work out their problems of law enforcement”). The lawfulness of Congress giving preapproval to interstate compacts that post-date the enactment of 4 U.S.C. § 112 by decades was specifically upheld in Cuyler v. Adams, 449 U.S. 433 (1981). The fact that 4 U.S.C. 112 is the only preapproval statute ever enacted without any sort of caveat prohibiting conflict between the compact it authorizes and federal law (and there are more than a dozen other such statutes with caveats) strongly indicates that it means what it says—it authorizes an interstate compact that could very well displace prior federal law.

6. What is the “Interstate” Component of the Compact?

The compact protects state law rights with reciprocal criminal law enforcement guarantees. The mutual guarantee of the continued protection of state law rights and privileges as a proper subject of interstate compacts has been recognized since Green v. Biddle, 21 U.S. 1, 39-40 (1823), which sustained an interstate compact that reciprocally guaranteed the continued protection of existing property and contract rights from “any law which rendered those rights less valid and secure.”

Interstate Compact General Strategic Overriding Communication Objective ("SOCO")

An interstate compact is a contractual agreement between states that is similar to a treaty. Federal courts have ruled that congressionally-approved interstate compacts are the equivalent of federal law. An existing federal statute gives preapproval to interstate compacts that coordinate criminal laws. Therefore, interstate compacts that coordinate criminal law enforcement of state laws have the status of federal law.

Interstate Compact [Fill in the Blank] SOCOs

The Interstate [_____] Freedom Compact establishes that it is both a state and federal crime for anyone, including federal officials, to interfere with state laws that guarantee [_____] freedom for their citizens, such as Arizona’s [____________] Freedom Act. Enforcing the [specify conflicting federal law or policy] would be illegal within the compacting states.

The Interstate [_____] Freedom Compact would have the ability to displace [specify conflicting federal law or policy] as a matter of state and federal law. This is because the Compact is authorized by an existing federal statute that gives preapproval to interstate compacts that coordinate criminal laws. Federal courts have ruled that Congress can effectively pre-approve interstate compacts. Federal courts have also ruled that congressionally-approved interstate compacts are the equivalent of federal law. These court rulings support a strong legal argument that the Interstate [_____] Freedom Compact will trump conflicting federal laws, such as [specify conflicting federal law/policy], when the compact becomes effective. The Interstate [_____________] Compact combines state sovereignty with the power of federal law to restrain the federal government.

Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact Specific SOCOs

The Obama Administration is pressing forward to implement the individual mandate to force citizens into health care collectives, which are called health care exchanges. This is despite the fact that two federal courts have held the individual mandate of the Federal Health Reform law unconstitutional. Arizona and its sister states must use their sovereign power to make it a crime to enforce the unconstitutional individual mandate. And they must coordinate their law enforcement efforts under the authority of existing federal law. The Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact is the vehicle for this effort. It will render any enforcement of the individual mandate within Arizona and other compacting states the equivalent of a federal crime.

In the years leading up to the civil war, Northern states criminalized efforts by southern slaveholders to capture escaped slaves within their territory. The Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact is in the same spirit—but this time the fight for freedom will not fail. The Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact will allow Arizona and its sister states to lawfully criminalize enforcement of the unconstitutional individual mandate and coordinate their law enforcement efforts. When the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact becomes law, state and federal law will shield Arizonans from being forced into federal health care collectives.

At least 27 states, including Arizona, are parties to the two recent federal court decisions striking down the Federal Health Reform law’s individual mandate. The rule of law requires the Obama Administration to stop enforcing the individual mandate in those 27 states. But the Obama Administration is pressing forward to implement the individual mandate to force citizens into health care collectives anyway. Arizona and its sister states will not let this happen. They have agreed to resist the unconstitutional individual mandate by adopting the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact, which makes it the equivalent of a federal crime to enforce the unconstitutional individual mandate within the jurisdiction of the compacting states.

General Interstate Compact Facts

1. An interstate compact is a contractual agreement among states, typically evidenced by an enabling act authorizing state officials to reach the agreement, a statute that memorializes the agreement and its terms, and a confirmatory writing manifesting the consent of signatory states to the agreement.

2. Although the Constitution provides that states may not enter into compacts without the “consent” of Congress, the Supreme Court ruled in U.S. Steel v. Multistate Tax Commission that congressional consent is only required for an interstate compact that attempts to enhance “states . . . [relative to] the federal government.” This means that congressional consent is not required for compacts that merely exercise the sovereign powers of the states without purporting to augment those powers relative to those of the federal government.

3. Today there are approximately 200 interstate compacts in effect, including water allocation and conservation compacts (37), energy and low-level radioactive waste disposal (15), criminal law enforcement (18), and education and child welfare compacts (13). The average state is a party to 25 interstate compacts. Perhaps the most aggressive effort to coordinate multistate regulatory power is the Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative, in which 10 states have agreed to apply “cap and trade” carbon regulations to themselves.

4. Congressionally-approved interstate compacts are recognized as equivalent to federal law under the Supremacy Clause and as a potential source of vested rights that are protected against federal regulatory action. In fact, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia held in 1987 that the liability provisions of the previously enacted Federal Employee Liability Act were displaced by the contrary provisions of the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) interstate compact. Additionally, in 1980, the Supreme Court protected water rights guaranteed by the Colorado River Compact against a federal agency’s efforts to undermine those rights by enforcing an inconsistent federal law. These cases mean that states can leverage congressionally approved interstate compacts to supersede prior federal laws and to protect themselves and their residents against the reach of future federal laws through the creation of vested rights protected by interstate compact.

5. The federal statute, 4 U.S.C. § 112, gives blanket consent “to any two or more States to enter into agreements or compacts for cooperative effort and mutual assistance in the prevention of crime and in the enforcement of their respective criminal laws and policies, and to establish such agencies, joint or otherwise, as they may deem desirable for making effective such agreements and compacts.” Such blanket congressional consent contrasts with more than a dozen prior, contemporaneous, and subsequent consent-in-advance laws that only give consent to interstate compacts that do not conflict with federal law. 4 U.S.C. § 112 thus provides the legal basis for states to enter into interstate compacts that mutually guarantee the protection of existing state law rights with the promise of criminal prosecution against anyone who would violate them. Under existing federal law, these compacts will be the equivalent of federal law and will override any prior conflicting federal law.
The Constitutionality of the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact

Per the request of several state legislators, this memorandum furnishes a scholarly explanation as to why the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact would be constitutional under current legal precedent concerning interstate compacts and the Supremacy Clause.

It is black letter law that a congressionally-approved interstate compact has the functional status of federal law. New Jersey v. New York, 523 U.S. 767, 811 (1988) (holding that congressional approval “transforms an interstate compact within [the Compact Clause] into a law of the United States”). Now, of course, a congressionally-approved compact is not literally a federal law. Nevertheless, although the theoretical underpinnings are somewhat hazy, the case law is very clear that a congressionally-approved compact can override prior federal laws and create vested rights that are protected from federal interference. See, e.g., Bryant v. Yellen, 447 U.S. 352, 369 (1980); McKenna v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, 829 F.2d 186 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

As I see it, the best theoretical explanation of this rule of law is that, by consenting to an interstate compact, Congress is ceding jurisdiction over the subject matter of the compact to the states who are parties to the compact. In other words, by consenting to a compact, Congress is waiving any possible conflict between the Supremacy Clause and the exertion of state sovereignty in question, and affirmatively yielding to the exclusive sovereignty of the states over the compact’s subject matter. Of course, Congress can retract its approval for the compact by rescinding it through appropriate action, which would render the compact invalid under the Supremacy Clause to the very extent it purported to displace valid federal law (unless the compact created vested rights, but even then, only those possessing the vested rights would be protected from the rescission of congressional consent—see Joseph Zimmerman, Accounting Today: Regulation of Professions by Interstate Compact, The CPA Journal (March 15-April 4, 2004) (observing, “What effect would a new congressional statute with conflicting provisions have on an interstate compact previously granted consent by Congress? The conflicting provisions in the consent would be repealed, with the exception of any vested rights protected by the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution”)). But the bottom line is, so long as an interstate compact has congressional approval, it cannot violate the Supremacy Clause.
An opinion that there is some sort of clash between the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact and the Supremacy Clause, therefore, assumes that the compact lacks congressional approval. That assumption is mistaken. There is no question that this compact is premised on congressional approval. It is based on the explicit grant of advance consent contained in 4 U.S.C. § 112. The power of Congress to give advance consent to interstate compacts has been upheld for nearly 200 years. See, e.g., Green v. Biddle, 21 U.S. 1, 39-40 (1823). 4 U.S.C. § 112 itself was specifically upheld by the Supreme Court as effectively giving advance consent to an interstate compact reached decades after the statute’s original enactment. Cuyler v. Adams, 449 U.S. 433 (1981). Therefore, 4 U.S.C. § 112 is a perfectly viable basis for regarding an interstate compact that is within its parameters as having been congressionally-approved.

There is no reason to look beyond the plain language of 4 U.S.C. § 112 to conclude that the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact enjoys advance consent from Congress. An unambiguous statute must be interpreted based on its text. On its face, the grant of advance consent in 4 U.S.C. § 112 is very broad and totally unlimited. So long as the compact in question coordinates criminal laws and creates convenient administrative structures that are within the power of the compacting states to enact, the compact falls within the scope of the plain language of 4 U.S.C. § 112. This is precisely what the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact does.

Even if one thought that 4 U.S.C. § 112 were ambiguous (I concede that it is being applied in an unusual way), the legislative history shows that it was in fact meant to avoid the restrictions placed by the Federal Constitution on viable interstate compacts. See S. Rep. No. 1007, 73d Cong., 2d Sess., 1 (1934); H. R. Rep. No. 1137, 73d Cong., 2d Sess., 1-2 (1934) (“This bill seeks to remove the obstruction imposed by the Federal Constitution and allow the States cooperatively and by mutual agreement to work out their problems of law enforcement”). I see no reason why this legislative history is inconsistent with the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact. The legislative history merely confirms that Congress really meant to give wide open consent to any sort of compact that fell within its broad terms.

must assume that 4 U.S.C. § 112 was intended by Congress to authorize even interstate compacts that might displace existing federal law.

Thus, in asserting that its terms displace contrary state and federal law, the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact does no more than what 4 U.S.C. § 112 authorizes under current case law that deems a congressionally-approved interstate compact functionally equivalent to federal law. Certainly Congress is free to decide, under the Supremacy Clause, that a congressionally-approved compact displaces conflicting federal law. This is not a novel possibility. History shows that President Roosevelt was contemporaneously engaged in repeated political battles over interstate compacts that attempted to displace federal power at the time. See Frederick L. Zimmerman & Mitchell Wendell, The Interstate Compact Since 1925, 16 & n. 78, 38 & n.162 (1951). It would be ahistorical to declare, against this historical backdrop, that 4 U.S.C. § 112 should not be interpreted to authorize compacts that could displace federal law.

Of course, one might be concerned that the underlying state laws that the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact might incorporate could violate the Supremacy Clause. This concern, although understandable, is not relevant to the merits of the compact itself. The compact cannot be impeached on the basis of state laws that have not yet been incorporated into it. Moreover, one should not presume, sight unseen, that the state laws the compact might coordinate would be unconstitutional.

Of course, the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact is designed to incorporate state laws that criminalize interference with Health Care Freedom laws, such as the ALEC’s model Health Care Freedom Act. Such criminal laws could be construed to prohibit enforcement of the individual mandate of Federal Health Care Reform. But this potential clash between Health Care Freedom criminal laws and Federal Health Care Reform does not mean there is a clash between such state laws and the Supremacy Clause.

As I am sure you are aware, a federal district court has declared Federal Health Care Reform, including the individual mandate, unconstitutional in a final judgment. Florida v. U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 3:10-cv-91-RV (N.D. Fla. 2011). So long as the judgment is not reversed (as is currently the case), party states that criminalize enforcement of Federal Health Care Reform, including the individual mandate, can advance a plausible legal argument that Health Care Freedom criminal laws do not violate the Supremacy Clause. The Supremacy Clause, after all, does not say that unconstitutional federal laws are the supreme law of the land.

States have the inherent police power to criminalize unconstitutional conduct by anyone, including federal agents. This is because federal agents who act unconstitutionally are, by definition, acting in a personal capacity, not on behalf of the federal government. See United States v. Lee, 106 U.S. 196 (1882); see also Leedom v. Kyne, 358 U.S. 184, 188 (1958); Larson v. Domestic & Foreign Commerce Corp., 337 U.S. 682, 690 (1949). So long as States defer to the ultimate adjudicative supremacy of the U.S. Supreme Court over disputed constitutional issues, they are not engaging in “nullification” by criminalizing the enforcement of federal laws by federal agents after federal courts deem those laws unconstitutional. Likewise, an interstate compact, such as the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact, that would incorporate state laws that criminalize the enforcement of unconstitutional federal laws is perfectly constitutional and consistent with the Supremacy Clause.

It is important to emphasize, however, that congressional approval of the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact does not concede that the federal government has power to regulate intrastate health care. The compact itself does not regulate health care; it regulates the interstate criminal enforcement of state laws that will protect the right to health care freedom. Even if it were conceded that the federal government has the power to regulate interstate agreements criminalizing interference with health care freedom, there is no inconsistency between that proposition and the claim that the feds lack the power to mandate the purchase of health care under the commerce clause. Moreover, Congress’ power to consent to interstate compacts can be used to effectuate enumerated powers and it can also be used simply to get out of the way of, and give federal sanction to, dealings between the states that are otherwise within their sovereign powers. In the latter usage, invoked by the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact, Congress is not making law per se, it is yielding to state sovereignty and waiving any possible conflict with federal law on the same subject.

Lastly, I emphasize that even if there were a clash between the Supremacy Clause and a state law that criminalized enforcement of the Federal Health Care Reform’s individual mandate within state boundaries, a plausible legal argument can be made that the clash renders the conflicting state law voidable, not void, until the state law is actually challenged and struck down in court (so long as the state law is otherwise within the inherent sovereign power of the state to enact it). Cf. Massachusetts v. Oakes, 491 U.S. 576, 584 (1989).

By incorporating a voidable state law into a congressionally-approved compact before it is struck down, one can make an argument that Congress has ratified it. Just as a voidable contract can be made effective through ratification, congressional ratification of a voidable state law would arguably give the state law the status of federal law (as per the general rule that treats congressionally-approved interstate compacts as equivalent to federal law). And if the only defect in the state law was that it clashed with the Supremacy Clause, that defect would be waived by virtue of the state law acquiring the status of federal law.
Thus, an interesting extension of current case law is that Congress can waive conflicts between the Supremacy Clause and state laws by incorporating those state laws into a congressionally-approved interstate compact before they are struck down. But even if this argument were ultimately to fail, the savings clause contained in the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact would protect the compact itself from being tainted by the incorporation of unconstitutional state laws, because they would be severed.

For all of the foregoing reasons, my research shows that the Interstate Health Care Freedom Compact would be constitutional under the Supremacy Clause if enacted into law.

HEALTH PROFESSIONAL MODERNIZATION ACT
(DRAFT, APRIL 29, 2011)

SUMMARY
The Health Professional Modernization Act addresses a problem that plagues states all over the country: lack of access to quality primary care. Generally, people think of their physicians when they talk about primary care providers, but there is a myriad of other avenues to quality primary care. For example, nurse practitioners are trained to handle the vast majority of basic primary care needs, but throughout many states, they are limited in their ability to do so by overly restrictive scope of practice laws.

By freeing primary care providers to practice to the full extent of their education and training, states can increase their citizens’ access to quality primary care. The Act also protects citizens by putting all primary care providers underneath the authority of their respective boards in their states. Also, the Act puts the regulation of these primary care providers underneath the authorities that understand them best but that still operate subject to the will of the legislature.

America’s doctors are the best in the world, and they should be dealing with world class issues of care. The basic primary care needs can be served more cost effectively by freeing all of our primary care providers to practice to the full extent of their knowledge and training.
